We, the Co-Editors and our staff, have tried to capture and preserve the things and events which happened during the year. We have tried and think we have succeeded in making this book a chronicle of the '72-'73 school year.

The pictures have caught most people at their best, which they think is their worst. No comment!

GRADUATION

Remember your first school dance, first homecoming, having upper classmen telling you to go to the end of the cafeteria line, pushing pennies down the hall with your nose; Now do you remember your freshmen year?

Then came your sophomore year. No more initiation, ordering your class ring, and if you were really lucky you got to be a prom waitress.

You're halfway now and things really started to move because this is your junior year; no more physical education, by now you should have completed driver's education, working at basketball concessions, decorating for prom, and maybe even getting a date for prom, regular visits to the guidance office for college information, and best of all one more year to go.

It's here-your last year. You thought American History was bad but then came Civics. Finally it was your turn to tell the freshmen what to do. Now that you are a senior Mondays seem twice as bad. Remember football concessions when you ate twice as much as you sold? Then came the more serious things such as senior pictures, graduation announcements, and future plans.

It took us twelve years to get here and in less than an hour it was all over. It seemed like graduation was always so far away but before we knew it today had arrived.
